

“We are what we repeatedly do.
Excellence then, is a habit”

Dedicating oneself to exploration and discovery is to ride upon a vehicle, which will embark on a colourful, diverse, thrilling, and sometimes shaky journey.

Our aim is to have a good ride, and to prepare ourselves for newness, and often-wonderful surprises.

What we will engage in is a form of ‘group play’!
The object, the goal for each of us is to find a new road to arrive at a place where we shall uncover another view, new scenery in the landscape of our creativity.

Creative people often, if not always, work alone. It is therefore a rather lonely existence. But as we have chosen to form a body together, we shall be in company and we will share the experience, no matter what the outcome is.

It is not always the end product that shakes the foundations. It is the journey, the joy and anguish, the tricks and changes of the focal lenses that alter us, often completely. Our newly found freedom without our chains strengthens all our senses.

My desire is for us to gather together, each with their own tool to assist in loosening and unravelling the knotted ball.

To achieve harmony we must all come prepared with an open mind, knowing that it is neither a race, nor a contest, nor a competitive ground that we have agreed to take part in.

We will derive pleasure in escaping from our traps and remove all barriers, to allow our selves to play!

And we will arrive at a point, which we will know for the first time.
